You may not use more than 3 slip days on a single assignment - that is the maximum you can hand an assignment in late is 72 hours (assuming you have enough slip days left to do so).

You will have to send an email in order to use your slip days for an assignment - more details to come in syllabus.

Assignment Slip Days - Examples

Tanisha has a cold the week Assignment 1 is due so she uses 3 slip days to give her more time to work on the assignment, she uses one on assignment 2, uses two slip days on assignment 3, and then uses two on assignment 4. Tanisha now has no slip days left to use for assignment 5.

Tian uses no slip days on assignments one through four, and then wants to use all eight slip days on Assignment 5. However, students may only use maximum three slip days on one assignment so Tian can only use three slip days on assignment 5 and his remaining slip days have no use.

It's okay if slip days go unused - don't use them frivolously as if you have a week with lots of deadlines or catch a cold at a future deadline you'll wish you still had some on hand.

Excused Absences

A student who misses coursework (Assignment, Morning Problem, Midterm) due to incapacitating mental or physical illness, severe domestic affliction or other compelling reasons can apply for an excused absence.

If an excused absence is granted the weight of the missed assessment is shifted to other assessments under the following scheme

- The weight of a missed assignment is shifted to the other assignments
- The weight of a missed morning problem is shifted to the other morning problems
- The weight of a missed midterm is shifted to the final exam
